FELLOWSHIPS/AWARDS/SCHOLARSHIPS/GRANTS/RECOGNITIONS

AWARDS

- Recipient of the University of Portland Outstanding Scholar Award (2021)

FELLOWSHIPS

Named a Fellow of the Westar Institute (2021 – present). “The Westar Fellows are a community of academics committed to engaging in collaborative, cumulative scholarship on questions about religion that matter in society. Westar Fellows are critical scholars. Critical scholars make empirical, factual evidence—evidence open to confirmation by independent, neutral observers—the controlling factor in historical judgments, rather than putting dogmatic considerations first and insisting that the factual evidence confirm theological premises.” I am currently holding two fellowships with this institute; the Christ Seminar Fellowship (tasked with a particular research collaborative to reimagine Christology that is relevant for our times) and the Westar Fellow (with a broader focus on one's intellectual impact on society in general).

- Named a Fellow of the Christ Seminar under the auspices of The Westar Institute (2021 – present). The Christ Seminar asks: What is the significance and the future of “Christ” in Christian thinking, worship practices, and social movements in the face of climate change, a global pandemic, Black Lives Matter, violence against women and children, and economic oppression? The Seminar will explore theologies and liturgical practices that are socially consonant with the emergence of minoritized and marginalized perspectives of the last half-century, that center the life and ministry of Jesus, and that are critical of the formations of Empire and the veneration of redemptive violence. This project will engage with the interaction of text and context and theology and praxis in Christologies that range from biblical and historical Christian traditions to contemporary decolonial, indigenous, intersectional, and ecological movements. The Seminar brings together scholars interested in speaking to the public and Christian communities, partnering with the Westar Institute which has a strong track record of reaching wider audiences.
